

Gatekeeper Systems, LLC Acquires activeRF

IRVINE, Calif., November 10 /PRNewswire/ -- Leading Retail Loss-Prevention Technology Company Adds Line of RFID Products

Gatekeeper Systems, LLC, a leading provider of retail loss-prevention technology solutions, today announced that it has purchased UK-based activeRF, a developer of RFID real-time tracking and locating systems for customers including Safeway PLC. The acquisition will enable Gatekeeper Systems to further increase its RFID engineering depth and broaden its line of front-end loss-prevention products.

"The acquisition allows us to add new dimensions to our technology," said Michael Lawler, President and CEO of Gatekeeper Systems. "We are continually looking to develop new applications for our core technology and we're confident this move will enhance our offerings in a variety of market niches."

Best known for its patented shopping cart security system, Gatekeeper offers additional retail loss-prevention solutions based on a single, integrated technology platform. The acquisition of activeRF will allow Gatekeeper Systems to deploy their core technology in a wider variety of applications and add robust network integration capabilities, including delivery of real-time data to a variety of front-end applications, such as conventional databases and specialized Java-based monitoring software.

"The potential of the activeRF technology opens doors to critical vertical segments such as security, manufacturing, transportation, and corporate asset management," added Lawler. "The acquisition of activeRF further strengthens our commitment to be the international leader in retail loss-prevention solutions."
